Commercial Photographer

I stumbled into photography during college, where I found my calling, a passion to create powerful visual images. Since then, I have gained over six years of commercial freelance experience, which has led me to where I am today. My philosophy is to learn something new on every shoot, to advance my craft every day, and to provide clients with innovative ways to promote their own passions and help them achieve the successes they desire. From photography services to marketing in both the traditional and digital sense, I am here to give clients the look they need to stand apart in a saturated world.

BayouLife, Fashion Spread

The fashion industry has an allure that draws me in; fashion photography provides the muse that keeps me striving for perfection. In this aspect of my work, I am duty-bound to show the clothing and the model in the very best light. I have made it a major part of my continuing education to advance my knowledge of all lighting techniques, so that I can produce photographs that fit the theme of the shoot or allow for the best possible portrayal of the clothing.

We eat with our eyes before we ever sample the food we see. It is my goal to deliver that visual feast to the viewers of my food photography. There is no one way to show off a cake from a local bakery or the newest entree at a local eatery. Presentation is everything and I set out to present culinary photography that sells. With my knowledge of lighting and staging, I can deliver any look that can be dreamed up.

People are fantastic. The endless array of humanity is the reason I enjoy my job being a photographer. Capturing an individual's essence, giving them an honest, authentic portrait of themselves, is my ultimate goal. Portrait photography can go a long way in setting the tone for corporate branding as well.

You want it; you've got it. High quality product photography is one of my strong suits. My clients' unique selling proposition is a driving force for me to provide innovative visuals that tell their brand story and showcase their products. My motivation is to create photographs that are integral to telling the brand's authentic history, while propelling the product forward, inviting consumers to see the product in a whole new light.

I believe there is always a better way to sell a product and to elevate a brand. In 2015, I set out to find that method of boosting sales with the creation of FoxHunt Creative Co. LLC. FoxHunt's goal was to give our clients innovative branding and a unique positioning look that would break through the clutter. Through the use of image-based marketing solutions, I provided 12 clients with a complete marketing experience. The turnkey service provided them with social media marketing and management, print ad creation and placement, up-to-date commercial photography and active marketing solutions. My clientele ranged from a small paper company to a local bank. Once marketing venture even led me to create an interactive marketing event, called Ruston Fashion Week. The purpose of the event was to promote one of my clients, a local high-end clothing boutique. The event, now in its third year, continues to be a huge success and drive business within the local community.
